

The Awakening of Faith in the Mahayana Doctrine: The New Buddhism (With Active Table of Contents)

Written from the perspective of Essence-Function (tiyong), this text sought to harmonize the two soteriological philosophies of the tathagatagarbha (or Buddha nature) and alayavijnana (or yogacara) into a synthetic vision based on the One Mind in Two Aspects. Although often omitted from lists of canonical Buddhist texts, the Awakening of Faith strongly influenced subsequent Mahayana doctrine. It was studied and commented on repeatedly by many East Asian scholars, including Wonhyo, Fazang and Zongmi. In great part due to the commentaries by Weonhyo, the Awakening of Faith ended up having an unusually powerful influence in Korea, where it may be the most oft-cited text in the entire tradition. It also provided much of the doctrinal basis for the original enlightenment thought found in the Sutra of Perfect Enlightenment. The view of the mind in the Awakening of Mahayana Faith had a significant import on the doctrinal development of the East Mountain Teaching.
